

Craft a critter

Animals have special skills that help them find food, protect themselves and build their homes. These skills are called adaptations. Make up your own animal and draw it with special skills or adaptations that help it survive.

Have fun and be creative!

Washington's state amphibian, the Pacific tree frog, changes color based on the air temperature throughout the year. This helps the frog hide from predators.

What are your animal's special skills or adaptations?

Creative challenge: If you could develop a special skill or adaptation, what would it be?
