Peshastin Pinnacles State Park

Welcome to Peshastin Pinnacles

Peshastin Pinnacles State Park

is a day-use park located in the foothills of the Cascade Mountains in Chelan County. The park features a group of sandstone slabs and spires called "the pinnacles." Climbable spires reach 200 feet into the air. Rocks and trails provide views of surrounding orchards, the Enchantment Mountain Range and the Wenatchee River Valley.

This 34-acre desert park is popular with hikers and climbers for its sweeping views of the Cascade Mountains and the Wenatchee River Valley. The park offers a 1.5-mile-steep hiking trail. For rock climbers, slabs and spires vary from easy to difficult and require rock-climbing equipment.

The park also offers wildlife viewing, picnicking and bird watching.

Park history

The park is named for its "pinnacles," or unique sandstone formations, and for the town of Peshastin, located 3 miles away. The area has been popular for rock climbing since the 1960s. In 1986, land owners closed the pinnacles to climbers for liability reasons. Later, The Trust for Public Land, a non-profit group, purchased and developed the site, then sold it to Washington State Parks. The park's unique sandstone formations were created when geological forces pushed an ancient sea floor up out of the ground.

Park amenities and facilities

Peshastin Pinnacles offers the following amenities and facilities to make your visit more enjoyable and comfortable, including:

- Five picnic tables
- Two CXT vault toilets
- 1.5-mile hiking trail
- No potable water supply is available in the park, so visitors are urged to take along their own water.
- Water and services are available in towns within 3 miles of the park.
