First-Come, First-Served Seasonal Campsites

Nov. 1 to April 15 is rainy season at Grayland Beach State Park.
Visitors may experience heavy rainfall and periodic flooding during that time.

What you need to know if you plan to visit:

- Conditions can change quickly in a dynamic coastal environment. Exercise caution and follow our Seashore Conservation Area rules.
- Access to certain areas of the park may be limited for vehicles with lower ground clearance.
- Be prepared for mud and standing water in campsites and throughout the park. Bring your boots!
- Parks advises visitors check park specific alerts and closures before visiting.

What you need to know if you plan to stay:

- Campsites, trails and roads may flood or be closed due to heavy rainfall.
- All sites marked "Restrictions" on our reservations site are available on a first-come, first-served basis.
- A camping reservation does not guarantee every part of the park will be accessible during flooding.
- Access to portions of campsites such as fire pits, utility box hook-ups and picnic tables may be limited.
